More knuckles. I can see a campaign now. A Dark Seas campaign full of knuckle raiding and gold grabs and knuckle fighting. The players are the knuckle rippers of the group, with the GM acting as the big bruiser in the background, with the rest of the group of the ship's crew and an admiral in charge. That's where I'm at in my campaign. Of course I am a very particular about what I play. Not everyone plays like that. In fact, a few people have said they don't want to play like that. We have a similar group. All of us play as very particular characters. The GM is the leader of the group, while the other players are his companions. Oh, and we do have multiple versions of the dark seas. We have an Arabian Nights version and the pirate version. The latter has ship fights with elementals, magic, curses, action items and boarders. That sounds pretty cool, I think I might be into that. We've had some good role-playing, but it tends to be one-sided. Half the time, it's one person doing all the work, which doesn't allow for a great deal of role-playing. As a GM, I do all the work, except I have my henchmen on the board with me, behind me, and in front of me. In my campaign, no one ever says anything. They don't need to, they're all badass. They're pretty much invincible. This isn't a real campaign, mind you, just a group of friends who are playing and having a great time. There is no need to role-play, it's just fun. 82157476af
